ORCHESTRATING THE NETWORK: APPLICATIONS THAT ACTUALLY FIT

The vast majority of your network complexity and cost creates network capacity not required to support your actual application workloads.

This is what the network looks like today

This is what the network should look like

Application requirements direct network capacity in real-time.

Direct network connectivity is given to application components that need to communicate with each other.